

OWAA Annual Conference Lake Charles, Louisiana

All supporting members of Outdoor Writers Association of America (OWAA) are cordially invited to participate in the organization's annual conference, June 17-20, 2006, in Lake Charles, La. For many members – both supporting and individual – annual conference is the highlight of OWAA membership. As with past conferences, this year's event will provide exceptional opportunities for you to build relationships with the outdoor media while showcasing your company's products or messages.

The headquarters hotel and meeting facility for the 2006 conference is L'Auberge du Lac. A hard-working OWAA committee has assembled an ambitious slate of workshops, seminars, technical sessions and events that should appeal to a great many members. In recent years, OWAA conferences have drawn crowds of 600 to 800, including up to 400 individual members of the outdoor press. Most arrive eager to discover and explore what's new in the outdoor scene. For you, the supporting member, simply registering and attending the Lake Charles conference will allow you to network with writers, photographers, broadcasters and other communicators. However, attending is only the beginning. Additional opportunities are listed in this packet. Review and select those that appeal to you.

The conference opens with registration on Saturday and ends with Tuesday's closing banquet. We encourage and invite you to attend as many functions as possible.

This packet is your only conference mailing; everything you need for registration and participation is included. Updates are available on our Web site at www.owaa.org. For all conference questions and requests, contact OWAA's conference planner, Eileen King, at eking@owaa.org or 814-364-9557.
